NIGHT OF THE SCORPION

Read the poem once. It is about the night when the poet's mother is bitten by a scorpion.

I remember the night my mother
Was stung by a scorpion. Ten hours
Of steady rain had driven him
To crawl beneath a sack of rice.
Parting with his poison – flash
Of diabolic tail in the dark room –
He risked the rain again.
The peasants came like swarms of flies
And buzzed the Name of God a hundred
Time to paralyse the Evil one.
With candles and with lanterns
Throwing giant scorpion shadows
On the mud-baked walls
They searched for him; he was not found.
They clicked their tongues.
With every movement that the scorpion made his poison moved in Mother's blood they said.
May your suffering decrease the misfortunes of your next birth, they said.
May the sum of evil balanced in this unreal world against the sum of good become diminished by your pain.

Notes

May the poison purify your flesh
 Of desire, and your spirit of ambition,
 They said, and they sat around
 On the floor with my mother in the center,
 The peace of understanding on each face.
 More candles, more lanterns, more neighbours more insects, and the endless rain.
 My mother twisted through and through groaning on a mat
 My father, sceptic, rationalist, trying every curse and blessing,
 powder, mixture, herb and hybrid.
 He even poured a little paraffin upon the bitten toe and put a match to it.
 I watched the flame feeding on my mother
 I watched the holy man perform his rites to tame the poison with an incantation.
 After twenty hours
 it lost its sting.
 My mother only said
 Thank god the scorpion picked on me and spared my children.

- Nissim Ezekiel
